

Abstract

A system for finding the instantaneous spatial azimuth and elevation of a source of radio signals employing phase digitizers to measure the phase of arrival of a radio signal on an array of antennas. The phase digitizers providing digital indication of the phase of arrival, enable the determination of the azimuth, and elevation of a source of radio signal, utilizing simple digital subtraction methods.